Our editors independently research, test and make advice on the best products; You can learn more about our review process here. We may receive fees for purchases made from our selected links. Best Rundown overall: Metro by T-Mobile, the best total prices for prepaid subscriptions across the country. Best Unlimited: Boost Mobile, Unlimited Calls, Text, and Data Plans start at $50 for one line and $110 a month for a family of three. Best every day: Wireless Republic, the opportunity to completely control what you pay makes republic a very attractive option. Best Basic: GoSmart Mobile, Unlimited International SMS Messages as well as Unlimited Access to 4G LTE from both Facebook and Facebook Messenger. Best detail: T-Mobile, Simply Prepaid is a great choice for individual shoppers looking for a single service line. Best Freedom: AT&A T advance, a family of four can be unlimited conversation and text, with 8 GB of high-speed data per line for $140 per month. Best coverage: Verizon Wireless, the best in the country for download and receive speeds where you need it most. The best seniors: Consumer Cellular, a mid-road fare plan for two people will run at about $55 a month with 5 GB of data. With a range of single and family line options available, Metro by T-Mobile offers the best overall prices for prepaid subscriptions across the industry. Whether it's an unlimited four-line plan starting at $120 a month or two lines starting at $70 a month, Metro by T-Mobile includes taxes and videos alongside unlimited talk, text and data. There are also less expensive offers for individuals or families, including a $30 offer that adds talk, text and 2 GB of unlimited data. Most Metro plans by T-Mobile also include 4G LTE mobile hotspot connectivity, as well as Wi-Fi calls and national coverage, thanks to parent company T-Mobile's coast-to-coast network. As a prepaid or complete user as you go, you can expect to pay full price for purchasing a device, including flagship smartphones like the Samsung Galaxy S8 or Apple iPhone 12. At the same time, you're welcome to connect your own compatible smartphone to your Metro by T-Mobile line at any time. If unlimited data with a bunch of extra benefits is what you're looking for, look for Boost Mobile for great pricing and unlimited data for the whole family. Unlimited speech, text and data plans start at $50 for one line and $110 a month for a three-year family. With unlimited data inclusion, Boost customers receive mobile-optimized streaming video, as well as 12 GB of mobile hotspot connectivity for future use. In addition, Boost customers can add an extra $10 to their monthly rate per line for video quality increases from 480p mobile-friendly to desktop-friendly streaming quality at 1080p. Adding international calls to Mexico is only $5 per month per line. The Boost network, supported by parent company Sprint, reaches almost every corner of the U.S. for nationwide coverage. For Phone users who don't need fancy perspirations like bizarre video programs, Republic Wireless provides a budget-friendly, prepaid option worth considering. Starting at $15 per month (when you select annual payment option) for call, text, unlimited, Republic customers can paste on an extra $5 per month for every 1 GB of additional data all the way up to 15 GB. Fortunately, as a prepaid option, customers can move back and forth each month with data allocations and not be tied to any specific amount each month, as you might be with an unpaid plan from one of the big four providers. The opportunity to completely control what you pay makes the Republic the most objective for general wireless use, and because it operates on both Sprint and T-Mobile networks, you're almost always guaranteed coverage anywhere in the country. People considering this option may also want to know how to avoid data accusations. When it comes to basics, look for GoSmart Mobile for a pre-plan that offers low-budget rates with some notable additions. From $15 a month for talk, text and 250MB of 3G data, GoSmart leaps to $55 a month and allows unlimited data at 3G speeds; An additional $10 adds mobile hotspot connectivity. While the 3G speed limit stands out, so do GoSmart's unlimited international text messages, as well as unlimited 4G LTE access to both Facebook and Facebook Messenger. Whichever GoSmart program you're on, each customer gets unlimited use of the Facebook platform. To access 4G LTE for Facebook, you need a 4G LTE-capable device and need to do it yourself, because GoSmart only provides the service and SIM. While competition in a prepaid space is fierce, simply Prepaid is a great choice for individual shoppers looking for a single service line. With unlimited talk, text, and up to 10 GB 4G LTE data for $40 per month, customers in this program have the option to bring their own device or purchase one directly from the provider. The kicker is when customers sign up with autopay each month, the rate drops an additional $5, bringing the new monthly amount to just $35 per month. If you want to jump just a little higher to add unlimited mobile hotspot connectivity, choose the $50 monthly rate plan, which drops to $47 with automatic renewal. A $15 international plan is also available, offering unlimited calls to more than 60 countries; An extra $5 will give you international migration in Mexico and Canada. You may also be interested in our round-up of the best non-contracted and prepaid cell phones of the year. AT&T is not the first company that comes to mind when it comes to prepaid mobile service, but it should be a consideration. AT&T has several programs to choose from for individual and family users. The program that offers the best deal in the AT&A lineup T is $25 per month (prepaid for 12 months) unlimited call and total text plan 8 of high-speed data. AT&T offers $10 AutoPay credit and paperless debit credit for each line in your phone plan. If you think you'll need more high-speed data, or if you want to use your mobile device as a wireless hotspot, AT&T also offers an unlimited speech, text, and data plan (which includes the ability to add mobile hotspot data) for just $50 a month (when choosing AutoPay). Additional discounts apply to those with multiple lines. AT&T now discounts two active lines per month by $10 and four active lines per month by $20. Need to read more reviews for family plans? Take a look at our selection of the best family cellphone plans. Their prices won't always be the most competitive, but it's hard to question Verizon's commitment to their network, making it the best choice for prepaid customers. Verizon's most popular prepaid plans start at $35 for the front row and offer unlimited talk, text and 5 GB of data; Program prices go all the way up to $65 for a single line with unlimited 4G LTE data when signing up for AutoPay. Each fare plan offers unlimited SMS messages to more than 200 countries around the world, while the higher-level programs include unlimited calls to and from Mexico and Canada. Family plans are available at all prices, though your total costs are rising rapidly for a five-year-old family. Fortunately, the high cost equates to stronger coverage, as Verizon's network is considered the best in the country for download and receive speeds where and when you need it most. For seniors who simply want the bare bones with a prepaid plan, consumer cellphone is what you're looking for. Designed with the older user in mind, customers can choose single-line, 250-minute or unlimited, and data plans that start up to 500 MB per month. A two-person interim rate plan would run about $55 a month with 10 GB of shared data. The deal becomes even more attractive for AARP members who can save 5% on their monthly service, soaring their monthly cost to an even more attractive $52.25 in monthly costs. Fortunately, you're never married to just one plan, as consumer cellphone allows customers to change plans each month to address different needs and budgets. Customers have the option to purchase devices directly from Consumer Cellular, including flipper phones designed specifically for an older customer with larger buttons and monitors, as well as newer flagship devices like the iPhone 12 and Samsung's latest phones.
